

Groundwater Infiltration Reduction Plan Summary

Background

During prolonged wet periods groundwater levels rise above our public sewers and private sewers and drains. Any cracks or holes in the sewer system can allow the groundwater to infiltrate and can inundate the sewers. This can cause sewer flooding and restricted toilet use which can continue for many weeks during very wet winters.

We have produced a video explaining this phenomenon and what can be done. The video is available to view on YouTube and can be opened by clicking here.

Catchments that are vulnerable to groundwater inundation are subject to Infiltration Reduction Plans. These plans are our commitment to inspecting sewers and making good any significant defects that could let the groundwater infiltrate into the sewer. This is normally achieved by lining the sewer with a watertight liner.

Activity

The following tables and figures show our progress in inspecting and sealing sewers identified to be letting groundwater infiltrate our sewers.

We are investing over £1 million per year on our infiltration reduction programme (IRP). The amount we invest in DWF exceedance inspections and repairs depends on the number of WRC catchments that we need to improve. In addition, we are also investing to address infiltration upstream of Frequently Spilling Overflows (FSOs) to reduce the spill frequency at those sites. For the next financial year (2024/25) we plan to invest over £3 million on infiltration reduction.
